CONGRESS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Wednesday December 7.

Debate on the Amendment to the Constitution.

(Mr. Randolph's Speech concluded.)

I scarcely expected this objection, Sir, from those who contend that the amendment under discussion narrows the influence and power of the smaller states. I shall not altogether rely on the extreme improbability of such an event, although it appears to me that it is as likely that the Senate, in such a state of things, should fail to elect a V. President, as that we should fail to elect a President. Remote as such an event is, for it depends on the election either of President or Vice-President by the electors, in the first instance a circumstance extremely improbable when a designation takes place, and, afterwards on a refusal on our part, to make a choice, out of those offered for our selection, I shall not dwell upon its being a case barely possible, but will ask whether the right of this House to make an election can be abandoned but with its own consent? But upon a refusal of its party to exercise its right of choice? And how the people can be said to be affected, by such a transfer of the right of election from this House to the other, when it is notorious that in electing that House, the vote is taken by states.—Those of the greatest population & wealth have no more influence than the smallest. Is not the Senate as likely to prove a faithful organ of the will of the states at this House voting by states? In conceding this point therefore, what do we give up? It is because the amendment contains the principle of designation;—because in the first place the electors must fail to elect a President, in the next place they must fail to elect a vice president; in the third place this House must refuse to exercise their constitutional right to choose a president, out of those in nomination for that office; because all these events must concur before an election can devolve upon the Senate; and then they are restricted to a small number of those nominated for the vice presidency—persons, too, who will be selected by the electors, with a view to this contingency; because the wealth and population of the states have no more influence here in an election than they have in the Senate; it is for these reasons that I am in favor of the amendment. Even if this possibility of the election of a chief magistrate devolving on the Senate, were more objectionable to me than it is, I would not sacrifice the discriminating principle contained in this resolution for a bare possibility. In case of a refusal, however, on the part of this House to make an election, will it not be better that the functions of president should be exercised even by a person nominated by the electors and appointed by the Senate, than that there should be an interregnum, as gentlemen have chosen to style it. Are not the people as willing that such an officer should discharge those duties, as that they should devolve upon a president pro tempore of the Senate, (a person who could never have been contemplated on his election to a seat in that body as succeeding to the presidency) who would necessarily act as president, in case of the death, resignation, disability, or removal from office, both of the president and vice president; events equally probable, and in my opinion more so than that contemplated by this amendment. But perhaps I shall be told that this position is inconsistent with a doctrine advanced by me at the outset, that I should approve an abolition of the office of vice-president. But the sole condition on which I would consent to such an abolition would be an immediate re-election in case of a vacancy in the office of president. I never could assent to the exercise of those powers by a president pro tempore of the Senate, longer than was absolutely necessary to make a new election by the people.

Having stated some of the reasons which will induce me to vote for the resolution on your table, permit me, Sir, to reply to some of the observations which have fallen from the gentleman from North Carolina and Connecticut. The first of these gentlemen (Mr. Purviance) is of opinion that the small states would never have come into the union, if the constitution had originally stood, as it is now proposed to amend it. A plain answer offers itself to this remark. If the small states are as hostile to this amendment as the gentleman supposes, they have only to put their vote upon it. The dissent of five states destroys it. If so little judgment has been displayed, by the friends of this measure, as to ensure opposition from all the states except those five states which the gentleman styles large states, in contradistinction from the other twelve, which he denominates small states, it was scarcely worth the trouble of the gentleman and his friends to make so vigorous an opposition to it.—but it is because I do not believe the resolution to be so drafted as to ensure opposition from the smaller states, because I judge of the temper of those states, as well by the approbation which three fourths of the Senate have given it, as by that which has been expressed in the course of this discussion from various quarters, that I am anxious for its adoption. The gentleman says that we had as well alter the ratio of representation from 33,000 to 500,000 and thereby deprive the smaller states of any vote on this floor. Surely the gentleman does not mean to say either that Congress have not the power to enlarge the ratio of representation, or that such increase would be injurious to the smaller states. The gentleman has expressed too great an attachment to the constitution not to be well acquainted with it. He must know that each state is entitled by it to at least one representative on this floor, and that by an increase of the ratio of representation the number of representatives might be reduced to that of the states, and the influence of the largest be only co-extensive with that of the smallest member of the union. And this was a well known objection urged to the adoption of the constitution. But at last the gentleman from North Carolina candidly confesses that he is averse to any alteration of the constitution whatsoever. One of my greatest objections to the constitution is the difficulty of obtaining desirable amendments which increases with the increasing number of the states. Thinking differently from the gentleman, on this point, he cannot be surprised at my acting differently. But he has surely little cause of alarm when he recollects that we possess merely the initiative in this business, and that the assent of three fourths of the state legislatures is necessary to give validity to what we shall do. I consider this as an answer to the charge of precipitancy, thrown out by the gentlemen from Connecticut, even if it were not fully answered by the history of this amendment. One of the same nature had passed that House during the present and the preceding session. It had been the theme of conversation and discussion, both in and out of doors; and now we are charged with precipitancy, although the resolution had to pass through the ordeal of three fourths of the states. But a more serious charge is brought against this amendment. It is denounced as opening an endless source of venality and intrigue. But to my mind the present system is more favorable to such mischiefs, and it is because I regard it as the death blow to all intrigue; because I do not wish chance to preside where there ought to be choice, because I want no blind ballot under cover of which intrigue or corruption may take shelter, that I advocate the resolution before you. From the manner in which some gentlemen have expressed themselves on this subject it would appear that they had had personal knowledge of some such agency heretofore. Whether such enginery has been brought into action I cannot undertake to affirm, on this subject I am totally in the dark—nor do I wish to be enlightened.

Much too has been said of the spirit of party exhibited on this occasion, and on what is due to decorum on so solemn a subject. We ought not we are told, to touch the constitution under the irritation produced by the struggle of contending factions. Most sincerely Sir, do I wish that the American public could have been spectators of this whole transaction—or even that every word or act which has passed within these walls, on this day, could go forth to the world, I am aware that this is impossible. But were it otherwise, I would willingly trust the issue of this question to the decision which should be given to the other. I would fearlessly leave the public mind to decide from what quarter party spirit and irritation have been manifested, by whom that conduct has been pursued which is calculated to reduce this house from the station which we ought to hold,—and to lessen us in the eyes of the nation.

Mr. R. Griswold. The gentleman from Virginia cannot expect at this late hour to go into a discussion of the merits of this important question. He has himself cautiously avoided giving extensively into them. Instead of shewing us that the amendment is not incompatible with the spirit of the confederacy, he has contented himself with stating that though he objects to one part of it, it contains one principle to which he is friendly; and therefore he will vote for it. Without assigning his reason he simply says, he will vote for it. Whatever gentlemen may propose, they cannot expect us at this late hour to go into a fundamental view of the principles this amendment contains. I therefore repeat the motion to adjourn, that we may to-morrow have the opportunity of discussing the merits of a question so important to the interests of the States.

The question was immediately taken on adjournment and lost—Ayes 47—Noes 75.

Mr. Elliot. As an adjournment has been denied it would not be considered as out of order, even at this late hour, to answer the elaborate speech of the gentleman from Virginia. I rise however to answer only one part of it. I wish with the gentleman from Virginia, that a correct view of the whole proceedings of this day may go to the public that they may be enabled to judge whether there has not been manifested, during the course of this business, rash precipitation, indecorum and party irritation. With the gentleman from Virginia, I am totally in the dark as to any intrigue heretofore exercised; that gentleman says that from certain circumstances he is induced to believe some persons know of some such intrigue. This I conceive to be an attack upon the minority which ought not to pass unnoticed. How far it is correct to impute such motives to gentlemen, entitled if not by the brilliancy of their genius yet by the public suffrage, to the same degree of respect with himself, I will not undertake to say. It is no privilege of a Representative to say, I believe you a corrupt, intriguing.

Mr. J. Randolph wished the Speaker to decide whether he had said any such thing.

Mr. Elliot. Such was my understanding of the gentleman's expression; the allusion was of a peculiar nature, and might be intended to impeach the motives of men of different political opinion from himself, or to impeach the motives of one or two members who generally agree with him. I know not his view in making the observation; but if the proceedings of this day shall correctly go to the public, I shall be much mistaken, if they will not be of opinion that there has been more indecorous language in the speeches of that gentleman than in all the others put together. I hope the language and conduct of gentlemen on this day may be recorded. I hope this will become a subject of investigation with the people—and I hope that posterity will have no occasion to impute to them party spirit, rash precipitation, indecorum, or any thing else, that that tends to lessen the respect which it is my sincere wish that the measures of this House should always command. I fear much, however, that the proceedings exhibited to day will constitute a scene on which posterity will not delight to dwell, that they will wish to blot from the annals of history, and that gentlemen themselves will, in the cool moments of reflection, regret that it ever existed. With one more remark I shall close what I have to say. If any imputation has, in the course of this debate, been aimed at my moral or political integrity, or if any hereafter shall be made from any quarter, however clothed in the language of brilliancy or decorated with the flowers of genius, I shall on all occasions meet it with contempt. I feel bold in the conscious purity of my motives, and I believe that the people I represent will never charge me with corruption or intrigue.

On motion of Mr. Smith the house adjourned at about 9 o'clock—Ayes 65.

(Debate to be continued.)

HALLIFAX, Feb. 9.

By a letter from Picton of the 2d inst. we learn that the ship Aurora, from Greenock for that place, had been cast on shore near Canby. The ship it is supposed will be lost. The crew and passengers are saved.

By some seamen arrived here, who lately belonged to the ship Aurora, Mr. Lean, from Greenock for Picton, we learn that the Aurora arrived off Picton, in 29 days passage; but was prevented by the ice from entering that harbor. After beating about some days, she sprung a leak; and both pumps not being able to keep her free, she was driven on shore in a gale of wind about three weeks ago, near the mouth of the Gut of Canby. Mrs. Hector McLean, his wife, sister and niece—Mr. McKenzies, and a Mr. Henderson, for Jamaica, were the passengers.

The only public intelligence which we have been able to obtain from the seamen, is merely negative. The invasion had not taken place when they failed; which must have been late in December.

FOR SALE, A TRACT OF LAND

formerly the property of Itham Keith, lying in the county of Fauquier, adjoining the merchant mill lately purchased of Nathan Mathew by Henry D. Hise, containing by deed 386 acres, about eight miles from the Court House, and is there by good judges, in point of fertility, inferior to no land in the county; it is well watered, abundant in fine low grounds; has on it a tolerable dwelling house, a small orchard, a sufficiency of timber and lays well.

Also, one other Tract, about ten miles above the Court House, containing about 600 acres; lying upon Carter's Run, near the main road leading to Winchester. This land is well watered, has many advantages attached to it; such as country mills, &c.—about one half in woods, and is considered as excellent for raising, being fine for either wheat, corn or clover.

To the Voters of Ward No. 4.

Finding by the law of Congress respecting the Corporation of Alexandria that I am not eligible to serve the town as a Common Councilman owing to my residence being out of town for several years past, I can only express my gratitude to the voters of my ward for this late mark of their confidence, and hope they will excuse the freedom I now take in soliciting their votes for my friend Abel Janney, who I believe very well qualified to fill the place intended for me.

COURT MARTIAL.

We learn (says the Natchez Gazette) by letters received in this town that the Court Martial have found the first charge against Col. Butler substantiated, viz. "disobedience of orders in refusing to crop his hair," and have sentenced him to receive a reprimand and that they have acquitted him of the second charge, viz. "Neglect of duty in not rendering himself to his command in this country."

It is reported, that the federalists in the middle and eastern states, propose holding up Mr. King and Mr. Pinckney for Presidency and Vice-Presidency, at next election. If this be true, their choice will certainly be equally acceptable to the federalists of the southern states; the Carolinas in particular. There is no citizen in the U. States, the integrity of whose political character is better established than Mr. King's. Having also been absent from this country during those late years, in which faction and party spirit have so much prevailed, he appears better calculated than almost any other individual for harmonizing the minds of our citizens, and restoring that peace and mutual concord which ought to be the basis of every well regulated government. Mr. King also, from his residence in Europe during the most critical period in foreign politics, is better versed and acquainted with the real designs of Great-Britain on this country, than any other man. Mr. Pinckney is universally acknowledged to be both a soldier and a statesman. Even the most daring among his opponents have neither impeached his integrity, his honor, or his talents. To the deep knowledge of the politician, he unites the most pleasing address, equally fascinating to the courtier and the honest republican. We have no doubt, if the northern states continue in the idea of electing Mr. King and Mr. Pinckney, that they will prove successful, and finally triumph over their enemies.

(Vir. Gaz.)

Memoranda.—Edward Livingston, late U. States District Attorney has actually confessed judgment for one hundred thousand dollars to the United States, on account of public monies which he has pocketed. Mr. Harrison was removed to make way for this hero of economy.

Major Hart, one of Mr. Jefferson's republican commissioners of bankruptcy for Connecticut, committed forgeries to the same amount, and has virtually resigned by running away.

The Postmaster of Upper Marlboro, (Maryland) has run away with all the receipts of the post office. A federalist has been removed to make way for this worthy patriot; who, no doubt, bawled as loud for liberty as the best of them.

INTERROGATORIES.

1. Do these facts confirm your belief in the good policy of removing faithful men from office to make room for needy favorites?
2. Is it more for the public good to be cheated by democracy, than to be faithfully served by federalists?
3. Are you a sporting, swaggering democrat? If so, we shall hardly be able to convince each other on these points, and had better leave the dispute where it is.

(Federal Ark.)

Another instance of consistency in the good patriots.

The following is an extract of a letter just received by the Southern Mail—

"When it suited the interest of a client, Dallas came forward a few days ago in the Supreme Court, to applaud and panegyrize the conduct of the last administration in the war with France. The warfare of the Grand Republique, he discovered, was unjust, impolitic, predatory, and dastardly. They had not courage (he said) to war upon our fleets and armies, but let loose their fleet of pirates to prey upon the weak and defenceless merchant, while pursuing an offensive and honorable commerce. On the other hand, (said this Proteus) view the glorious sacrifice of our administration; fired with just indignation against the authors of those degrading injuries, they did not hesitate, but appealing to Heaven, resolved to redress their own wrongs; not upon the individual, but against the nation, did they make war; and even mark the justice which governed them against those ships alone which were found to have committed acts of hostility or aggression—This, please your honors, was just, was great, was magnanimous, was worthy the nation, whose interests they sought to promote; whose honor was in their hands—Now had any one brought to his view the pages of the Aurore, for more than two years filled with scurrilous invective against the administration for this very magnanimous conduct, do you think he would have blushed? If you think so you do not know Mr. Dallas."

IMPROMPTU.

On reading 1, 2, 3, in the Expositor of Thursday last.

SANGRADO, finding his lance rusty,
For lack of practice has grown rusty;
With other methods, now will greet us,
Of giving patients their quinquina:
When any man will not be bled,
By aguila, he strives to murder him dead.
Rejoice, my friends, SANGRADO'S quill,
Being made of lead, no blood will spill.

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Wednesday, February 29.

Mr. Jackson moved the going into committee of the whole on the report of the committee of elections, respecting the fear of Thomas Lewis.

Mr. Dana moved a postponement of this order until to-morrow, and required the yeas and nays, which were yeas 64, nays 58.

The House went into a committee of the whole, John C. Smith in the chair, on the bill making appropriations for carrying into effect the convention of the 11th August, 1802, between the United States and the King of Spain.

The bill appropriates 15,760 dollars for the compensation of two commissioners, half of the fifth commissioner, a secretary, and an agent.

Having passed through the committee, the House ordered the bill to a third reading to-morrow.

Mr. Finley, from the committee of elections, made a report on the representation of Duncan M'Farlane, complaining of the undue election of Samuel D. Purviance. The report concludes with the opinion that there is not a sufficient evidence to set aside the election of Samuel D. Purviance.

Mr. Eppes from the committee appointed to enquire whether the monies drawn from the treasury on account of the marine corps have been faithfully applied to the public service, made a report, which concludes with recommending a resolution, that provision ought to be made by law for a monthly or quarterly adjustment of the accounts of the marine corps.

NORFOLK, February 25.

Deplorable and Distressing FIRE!!

On Wednesday night, about 11 o'clock, the inhabitants were roused from their beds with the repeated cry of FIRE!—which was perceived issuing from the warehouse of Mr. Dunlap, on Maxwell's wharf, and which raged and spread with such fury, that the only exertion which could be made by the activity of the citizens to arrest its progress, was the blowing up of several houses, or it is probable not a house in the Borough would have escaped destruction. It has laid waste the most commercial part of the town, having totally destroyed every building on Campbell's wharf, Maxwell's, Marsden's, Rothery's, Commerce Street, Warren's and Woodside's wharves, and progressed up the Market Square to the Main Street, and continued its ravages along the Main street to Mr. Whitehead's new buildings, reducing every house in Wide and Little Water Streets. Were it not for the exertions of a few who manfully resisted the flames, and prevented Mr. Taylor's warehouse adjoining Woodside's wharf from taking fire, the whole of the valuable buildings on Town Point must have been laid waste.

Some lives were lost, and many persons badly wounded by the blowing up of the houses. The market house was partly cut down, which prevented a communication of the flames to the north side of the Main street, which luckily escaped. Upwards of 260 houses are totally destroyed, and the estimate of general loss, is, on a moderate calculation, supposed to exceed ONE MILLION of dollars. Numbers of lighters owing to their being overloaded, and the tide being remarkably low, were burnt in the docks. Several vessels at the wharves took fire, and some in this state drifted to Portsmouth, when it communicated and destroyed some others—indeed, at one period, it appeared as if Portsmouth was on fire.

The raging of the flames, the columns of smoke, the blowing up of houses, the rainy night, the property exposed for safety in the streets, the cries of those who were seated by their little property sheltered only by the canopy of Heaven—the ships on fire drifting in the harbor, together with the probability of the whole town being destroyed, exhibited altogether to the senses and to the eye, an awful and dreadful picture. Thousands must have been deprived of a resting place, as it was the most populous part of the Borough.

What adds to the above melancholy narrative, is, that a snow and very severe frost came on before many an unfortunate family could find shelter for their wearied limbs. We are happy to learn, that the Corporation have allotted money for the immediate relief of the needy sufferers, who will receive assistance on application at the Office of JOHN NIVISON, Esq. Handbills to this effect appearing in different parts of the town; those happy beings, therefore whom Providence has blessed with affluence, have now a fine opportunity to exhibit their benevolence, by adding their liberality to that of the Corporate Body; and, we have no doubt, but the same will be cheerfully received at the above office, and with equal satisfaction distributed.

The inhabitants of all descriptions, shewed great activity; but it is to be lamented, that there were so few buckets and axes, and that the engines are not kept in better order, as they were of little or no use.

The Herald Office was totally destroyed, but what types could be saved are removed to a wing of the Play-House, from which place the "Norfolk Herald" will be published twice a week until the weather moderates, and the Editors can get more comfortably situated. From this statement, and the loss the proprietors have experienced, it is to be hoped, that our country subscribers particularly, will feel it not only an act of justice, but, at the present crisis, an act of humanity, to forward their arrears with all speed.

If possible a list of the sufferers on this melancholy occasion, will be given in our next.

Since writing the above, a gentleman handed us the following statement of houses burnt down:

Maxwell's wharf	13
Campbell's do.	9
Rothery's do.	18
Macdonald's do.	5
Commerce street do.	19
Woodside's do. both sides	17
Warren's do.	6
South side of Wide Water street, from Campbell's wharf to Commerce street.	17
North side of Wide Water street from Market square to Commerce street	30
South and North side of Wide Water street to Warren's wharf	17
Commerce street, from Wide Water street up to Main street	14
Narrow Water street, from Market square to Commerce street	40
Narrow Water street, from Commerce street towards the Exchange Coffee House	11
From Narrow Water street on the west side of Market square to Main street	12
From the corner of Market square on the south side of Main street to Commerce street	14
Gow's Alley and Lanes back, Rothery's Lane,	11
	12
Total,	260

By an accurate statement as can at present be made, the value of houses alone destroyed is estimated at 250,000 dollars.

Vessels destroyed.

Ship Jackson, of Plymouth, Massachusetts.
A French brig, name unknown.
Big Eliza, (coppered,) of Charleston.
A British Sloop.
Two S.S.s. laden with Flour.

It is to be hoped, that the conflagration of which we have this day given an account was accidental; yet from some alarming circumstances that have since occurred, it is much to be apprehended, that some vile incendiaries contemplate the total destruction of this town; but we trust the vigilance and activity of the magistracy will be such as to discover it. This observation is produced by the attempt made at eleven o'clock last night to set on fire the stable of Dr. James Taylor. The clump of fire was placed at the sill of the door, and had burnt through and communicated to some oat straw, but was providentially discovered by the watchmen in time to prevent its progress. Several of the weather boards were burnt through and part of the floor, and had it not been arrested, as the wind was, the east end of the town must have become a bonfire.

ELE DITION
The HOLY BIBLE.
PROPOSALS
For Printing by Subscription, (in four handsome octavo volume)
THE HOLY BIBLE, CONTAINING
The Old and New Testaments.

CONDITIONS.
It shall be printed on a superfine paper, with an elegant new type.
The price to subscribers will be Two Dollars per vol. in boards, or Two Dollars and Fifty Cents, handsomely bound and lettered.
To those who subscribe for several copies, a discount will be made, proportioned to the number subscribed for.
THE advantage of having this valuable Book printed on a large type, and, at the same time, in portable and convenient volumes, appears so evident, that the encouragement necessary to warrant an undertaking of such magnitude, is confidently expected; a portable volume would often be taken up, in a moment of leisure, when the size of a large, unwieldy folio, would operate as an apology for leaving it unopened; in this way, small portions of time would be profitably employed, which might otherwise be totally lost. In large families a Bible in volumes, affording an opportunity for several to read at once, may sometimes be peculiarly convenient; it seems superfluous to add much on this subject— suffice it to say, that no reasonable expense or pains shall be spared, to render this edition of the Holy Scriptures both correct and elegant.
The above work is in press, and will be finished about the end of the present year.

Subscriptions received by R. and J. Gray, King street, where a specimen of the paper and printing may be seen.

This lottery has been authorized by the legislature of Virginia, for the laudable purpose of erecting a seminary of learning in or near the metropolis of this state. With this view, it is contemplated to raise 30,000 dollars, and a 500 dollars in addition, for defraying the expenses attendant on drawing the lottery. Citizens of the first respectability have been selected as trustees, and they have pledged themselves to use their utmost exertions to carry it into effect. The scheme has the advantage of giving to each adventurer, a chance for some very large prizes, whilst the proportion of prizes to blanks, is so great as to invite the friends of the intended institution to partake of the lottery, with very little risk of their becoming losers. The treasurer of this state is to be appointed to receive the money for the tickets as they are sold, and to pay the amount of the prizes to the fortunate adventurers. It is believed that the above considerations will induce a rapid sale of tickets and the drawing will commence as soon as a sufficient number shall be sold to authorize it—which it is believed will be on the second Monday in December next.
